

ABSTRACT

5 The present invention is an improvement in the treatment of migraine headaches. By administering dihydroergotamine sublingually, major limitations of past treatments are circumvented thereby allowing for higher efficacy and fewer side effects of treatment at lower doses.